OFS confronts Drea

The Oregon government, represented by Governor Albin Christensen, is facing a lawsuit from the Oregon Federation of Students (OFS) for allegedly violating the Oregon Freedom of Access to Educational Institutions Act (FOIA) by withholding information from the public about the firing of Alex MacEachron.

The lawsuit, filed in Multnomah County Circuit Court, alleges that the OFS, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, was denied access to certain documents and information that it requested under the FOIA. The OFS is represented by the law firm of Christensen, Christensen & Christensen, Portland.

The lawsuit also alleges that the Oregon government violated the OFS's right to a fair and equitable hearing. The OFS is seeking damages of $100,000 and an order that the Oregon government provide the requested information.

Reed attempts mature writing on Blue Mask

Lee Reed in the play will go on display and poetry will rock and roll to match speed, momentum, and mood.

And in Blue Mask, Reed writes in his just-as-vivid style.

Lyric lines have a Blue Mask

The Blue Mask in Lee Reed's first full-length play is a mature writer's work, while evoking some of the fun of his old rock and roll-themed persona. Both Reed and Reed's work, it seems, flourish through their wit.

Lee Reed's past work, both rock and roll and the varied theater, has been a constant center of the local music scene over the past three years. Reed's work and his own music have been a constant center of the local music scene over the past three years. Reed's work and his own music have been a constant center of the local music scene over the past three years.

The Blue Mask, however, is a more dramatic work, with a plot that is a story of a young man's life in the city of New York. ## Action stimulates audience

A long, heavy, (bored) style audience has been a real problem for the local theater scene.

When the audience is bored, they are not interested in the play. They are not paying attention to the action and are not enjoying the performance.

The audience is bored because the play is not interesting. It is not a good story and the acting is not good. The audience is not entertained and is not enjoying the performance.
